Danza de la Pluma (Oaxaca)

- What it is: A iconic Zapotec traditional dance from the Central Valleys of Oaxaca that reenacts the conquest of Mexico.
- The Headdress: Dancers wear massive, fan-shaped penachos (headdresses) adorned with bright, cascading bird plumes and mirrors that catch the sun to resemble magnificent plumaged birds. Smithsonian Center for … +3

Danza de los Voladores (Veracruz / Puebla)

- What it is: An ancient Mesoamerican ritual where four dancers spin and descend from a towering 30-meter pole while attached by ropes, symbolizing bird flight and the connection between earth and sky.
- The Attire: Performers wear caps or hats decorated with plumes meant to honor sacred birds like the quetzal. Wikipedia +4
